Since 2009 the Vienna Concertino has been bringing together the elite of the Vienna Symphony Orchestra and reducing it to its purest form, a form closely tied to ancient Viennese musical tradition. The first such ensemble consisted of a string group in a 6-4-3-3-1 lineup accompanied by varying wind sections, and this simple group of musicians, formed so as to elevate chamber music to a previously unrealised level, quickly became synonymous with performances of the highest calibre.

The Vienna Concertino represents much more than a mere journey through history. It brings grandeur, intimacy and high culture to life, and the works of both classical and contemporary composers are performed to an unprecedented level. This being the case, you're unlikely to hear a more authentic Viennese waltz elsewhere. Moreover, a measured degree of the much-discussed Viennese sense of humour indicates a genuine ode to Viennese classical music, the climaxes of which the Vienna Concertino play with unparalleled joy.

The stunning opening concert of the „Concertino in Casino“ series quickly established the Vienna Concertino's primacy. Conducted by Dimitri Kitajenko, the ensemble managed to capture the public's imagination and thus grow in popularity rapidly. The signing of renowned piano player Carlo Grante ensured that the performances constituted a celebration of music at a genuinely world class level and the public responded with standing ovations.
